

PETER:

Cut it. I said cut it. You know, I had you pegged right from the start. You're the spoiled brat of a rich father. The only way you can get anything is to buy it. Now you're in a jam and all you think of is your money. It never fails, does it?

Ya ever hear of the word "humility"? No, you wouldn't. I guess it never occurred to you to just say, "Please, mister, I'm in trouble. Will you help me?" No, that'd bring you down off your high horse for a minute. Well, let me tell you something, maybe it'll take a load off your mind. You don't have to worry about me. I'm not interested in your money or your problems. You, King Westley, your father -- you're all a lot o' hooey to me. So long, Miss Andrews.

OR

Fallen in love? Sure. I've thought about it. Yeah, who hasn't? If I could ever meet the right sort of a girl-- Yeah, but where're you gonna find her? Somebody that's real. Somebody that's alive. They don't come that way any more. You know, I saw an island in the Pacific once, never been able to forget it. That's where I'd like to take her. She'd have to be the sort of a girl who'd jump in the surf with me and love it as much as I did. You know, nights when you and the moon and the water all become one. And you feel you're a part of something big and marvelous. Those are the only places to live. Where the stars are so close over your head that you feel you can reach up and stir them around. Sure, I've been thinking of it. Boy, if I could only find the girl who was hungry for those things.

ELLIE:

You think this whole business is silly, don't you? I mean, running away and everything. Yes, you do. You think I'm a fool and a spoiled brat. Well, perhaps I am, although I don't see how I can be. People who are spoiled are accustomed to having their their own way. I never have! I've always been told what to do and how to do it and where and with whom. Nurses, governesses, chaperones -- even bodyguards! (IRONIC) Oh, it's been a lot of fun. Mmm, it had its moments. It got to be a sort of a game to try and outwit father's detectives. I did once -- actually, actually went shopping without a bodyguard. It was swell, I felt absolutely immoral. But it didn't last long. They caught up with me in a department store. I was so mad, I ran out the back way and jumped into the first car I saw. Guess who was in it? King Westley.

SHAPELEY:

My name's Shapeley. Might as well get acquainted, it's gonna be a long trip. Gets lonesome later on, especially for somebody like you. You look like you've got class. Yes, sir, with a capital K. And believe me, I'm the guy that knows class when I see it, believe you me. Ask any of the boys, they'll tell ya. Shapeley sure knows how to pick 'em. Yes, sir, Shapeley's the name and shapely's the way I like 'em. Say, what's the matter, sister? You ain't sayin' much.

Ha-ha-ha! That's pretty good. "It seems to me you're doing excellently without my assistance." Well, shut my big nasty mouth. Looks like you're one up on me. Now, say, look. You know, there's nothing I like better in this entire world than to meet a [high-class] mama that can snap 'em back at ya. Yes sir, you're just my type. Believe you me, sister, I could go for you in a big way. "Fun-on-the-side" Shapeley they call me and the accent's on the fun. Believe you me!

ANDREWS:

What's the matter, child? What's wrong? You haven't changed your mind about King Westley, have you? Because if you have, it isn't too late. You know how I feel about him. But you gave me such a scare when I couldn't find you. You know, the old pump isn't what it used to be. What's the matter, child? Aren't you happy? Ahh, I thought so. I knew there was something on your mind. Aw, there, there, there now. What's the matter? You haven't fallen in love with someone else, have you? Have you? I haven't seen you cry since you were a baby. This must be serious. Where did you meet him?

ANNOUNCER (MALE OR FEMALE):

It takes only a few minutes to Lux your things after every wearing. A quick dip in Lux suds removes every trace of perspiration and leaves things fresh and lovely-looking. There is no harmful alkali. Absolutely nothing in Lux to fade colors or hurt fabrics.

You can use it safely for anything safe in water alone. So get the generous large-size box of Lux Flakes and Lux underthings and stockings after every wearing -- your dresses, sweaters and blouses, often. This dainty habit means so much to your happiness, helps you stay sweet and lovable -- a woman everyone admires. And now, here's Mr. DeMille.